HIGH SCHOOL SENIOR PLAY

The allegory of "Every youth" was presented by the seniors in a way that was creditable to the school, the players and the one who had the direction of the play in charge. The allegory presents a moral that is good, showing the danger of a young man as he listens to false advisers, then his recovery, as his better nature is helped to triumph by the advice of true friends, and the true friends were shown to be those who asked for the higher, the better and the nobler. The character of "Every youth" was taken in a way almost equal to a professional. "Work" was presented in a way that won every listener.

But why name them? Each character was taken just right, the stage setting good, the make up of the characters showing much careful thought and earnest work. The play was given under the direction of Miss Dorothy White of the high school and she is entitled to much credit. The Goodwin aerodrome was taxed to its utmost limit to accommodate the crowd in attendance.

EIGHTH GRADE COMMENCEMENT

The commencement exercises, or graduating exercises for the eighth grade was given in the high school auditorium Friday morning at ten o'clock.

The principal-elect of the high school, Oscar Mullen, gave the address to the class. His remarks were well chosen, pointing the class onward to continued effort, and higher ideals. Superintendent of public schools Sullivan presented the diplomas to twenty-four who had finished the work of the eighth grade. A quartet of young women from the senior class of the high school sang "Sleep Kentucky Babe." The singers were Clara Turner, Marion Cook, Laura Jensen and Louise Fisk. The class sang a "Boating song."

With a few well chosen remarks Principal Cash turned the class back to the parents to help in sending them higher in their work of school. The class was given a five course banquet at the home of the principal, C. C. Cash, on Thursday evening, Mrs. Cash helping Mr. Cash make the evening one long to be remembered by the young people. The class presented Mr. Cash with a beautiful watch fob as a token of respect.

Charge of Aggravated Assault is Changed to Simple Assault in Case of State vs. Al Comer

The case of the state vs. Al Comer wherein he was charged with aggravated assault upon the person of one Maurice Long about one month ago, was called in Justice Irwin's court yesterday morning. It developed that Maurice Long, the prosecuting witness, has left the state or at least was thought to be without the jurisdiction of the court. The attorney for the defendant, M. J. Dougherty, stated that the defendant would plead guilty to the charge of assault, and the complaint was so made.

The hearing of the state vs. Paul Arwood, Al Comer and Blome, was then called. District Attorney Lyman asked for a half hour's adjournment of the court to give him time to confer with the officers. At the end of the half hour the district attorney appeared in court and moved that the cases against the defendants be dismissed. He stated that the prosecuting witness, Maurice Long, the defendant Blome and the defendant Paul Arwood were without the jurisdiction of the court and that he could not make affidavit as to when the trial could proceed. He thereupon stated that he would not resist a motion to dismiss the cases against the three defendants. The motion was then made and the defendants dismissed from custody. The cases were first set for trial April 20th, but have been postponed from time to time on account of the disappearance of the chief witness for the prosecution, Maurice Long.

These are the cases growing out of the operation of the Jonathan club in this city. The real intent of the officers to close the club was effected and the liquor found there in and placed in the hands of W. A. Burton for safekeeping.

There were thirty-eight members of the class—the largest in the history of the school. The Vance auditorium, the largest building in the city, was crowded last night to hear the program.

as it reaches the humid atmosphere of the eastern states or else there is a difference in the weights of this state and Rhode Island. The Mesa Egyptian Cotton Exchange sent 62 bales of extra variety cotton east which increased more than eleven pounds per bale, the choice increased an average of 3.82 pounds per bale and the standard increased 3.14 pounds per bale. The diversity in the weights has caused the bookkeepers no little end of trouble in being compelled to figure out the entire amount coming to each of the growers having an interest in the shipments where there was a difference on the weight from the ginning weights at the time of shipment.
